NATIONAL REGULATION

Law of 4 December 2019 enacting macroprudential measures for residential real estate credit

The law on borrower-based measures provides the CSSF with powers to frame mortgage lending criteria in order to avoid financial stability risks. The law allows the CSSF to frame lending for residential real estate through five different metrics: the loan-to-value ratio, the debt service-to-income ratio, the debt-to-income ratio, the loan-to-income ratio and the maturity of the loan. These measures may be applied alone or in combination. They may be applied to the entire portfolio of a bank or to a share of it. If enacted, they would only apply to new loan issuance and not to the stock of outstanding loans.

In order to assure a sound governance, the CSSF needs a formal recommendation from the Comité du Risque Systémique ("CdRS") before it can activate measures. The CSSF cannot decide on such measures by itself. A thorough risk assessment as well as an impact assessment will have to be submitted by member authorities to the CdRS to allow an informed view on the necessity to enact borrower based measures.¹ The Comité du Risque Systémique may, based on this analysis, issue a recommendation which enables the CSSF to act. In the course of this process, it has to be shown that no other macroprudential tools can address this particular vulnerability.

Luxembourg was over the last years encouraged by international institutions to put in place a legal framework for borrower based measures. Following the financial crisis that hit Europe a decade ago, similar laws have been implemented across Europe. For Luxembourg (as well as a number of other EU countries), a warning was issued by the European Systemic Risk Board in 2016, followed in 2019 by a recommendation to act. The IMF also has called on the authorities to create such a law, as did the OECD in a special feature relating to residential real estate. The law on borrower-based measures is the response to this.

Circular CSSF-CPDI 19/19 - Survey on the amount of covered deposits

The aim of the circular is to request information on deposits, in particular covered deposits, of all credit institutions incorporated under Luxembourg law, of POST Luxembourg for its provision of postal financial services and of the branches of credit institutions having their head office in a third country as at 31 December 2019.

Circular CSSF 19/731 – Documents to be submitted to the CSSF and the ECB

The purpose of the circular is to amend Circular CSSF 19/710 on documents to be submitted on an annual basis by credit institutions. It also repeals, for some of the listed documents, the communication in paper form and introduces the exclusive communication in electronic form via one of the secured channels e-file or SOFiE. Moreover, it repeals and replaces Circulars CSSF 19/710, CSSF 15/624, 15/602 and CSSF 10/457.
